TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels constive, Sick Headache, Fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Erection of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Flitting at the heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the kidneys and skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

A Heroine's Seagirt Home.

Within a short mile of the quay at Newport, Lyme Rock rises out of the waters of Narragansett Bay. On this rock stands the old lighthouse which was tended for many years by the father of Ida Lewis, and of which she now under the seal of the Government Commission, is keeper. Securing the services of the Captain of a diminutive boat fastened on the waters blue to her abode, for the purpose of paying her my respects. As we approached the rock an immense mastiff, with head and paws like a lion and a roar like far-off thunder, came to its extreme verge and disputed our landing. He was entirely successful until the heroine appeared, called him off in the lowest of tones, and locked him up in an outhouse. She then invited me into the little house on the top of which rests the beacon light which has for so many years warned the navigators of hidden dangers, and at once entered into easy and unrestricted conversation. She said that she had for twenty-five years lived on that rock; that she used to be fond of going to the city once in a while, but that she cared very little for it now; that she always had a great many visitors in the summer, a few years ago the number reaching thousands in one season. She showed me her medals, received from Congress, the State Massachusetts, and the city of Newport and a solid silver teapot from the officers of Fort Adams.

A slender figure, good looking, with great earnest eyes, between brown and gray. While she cannot be called handsome, her face is one to interest and attract. Her style of conversation is piquant and vivacious, and although not educated she is intelligent. Everything about her and her apartments bore the evidence of neatness, care, and good taste. Her mother a venerable old lady, with thick silver hair, was very talkative and discoursed on matters and things, personal and otherwise, at length. She informed me she had the rheumatism in her feet, and Ida insisted that it was because she had dyed her hair for so many years. She communicated the intelligence that her daughter was about forty years of age, at which Miss Ida evinced a slight tinge of annoyance and remarked: "Mother thinks she must tell every one my age." But she quickly added: "Well, I don't care, it don't make any difference. I don't object to getting old."—Newport Letter.

An Island of Pretty Women.

The Channel Islands, and particularly Jersey, possess much of interest for the stranger, but the crowning glory of Jersey is the beauty of her women. For general comeliness they would readily be awarded a prize in any competition of feminine grace. Rare, creamy complexions that would put the bloom on the peach to blush, figures made graceful and sinewy by bodily toil, with rather strong cut features, eyes like sloes, and dark lustrous hair, the girls met on the streets of St. Helier's seem, to the stranger, the personification of womanly independence, beauty and maidenly reserve. The soft white mists that wrap the island every night from sundown to sunrise give them their carnation cheeks. The toll that brings with it the active, healthy body is due to causes which will enlist on the side of these women the sympathies of true manhood. It is because of the woeful dearth of men in Jersey that the women do all the work. Where you meet one man in these tortuous streets of St. Helier's you meet ten women.

Out among the green farms this disproportion of the sexes is even more painfully apparent. The heavy, ungainly carts, on the country roads are almost without exception driven by women, and handsome women, too. Groups of cherry-cheeked girls may be seen in the wayside orchard, some picking apples from the trees, others straining at the rude cider presses. The little fields, with their luxuriant growth of turnip, cabbages and rutabagas, are all tended by women, while the blooming flowers in the house-yards show in their rich variety the evidences of woman's care and attention. None but women are to be seen in the big public market of St. Helier's—women buying and women selling. What men you see are either too young or too old and decrepit—boys who have not yet started out in life, or old sea captains who have come home to end their days, smelling of salt cod and full of reminiscences of stormy voyages to Buenos Ayers, to Australia, or through the China Seas.

The apotheosis of dramatic criticism has been reached. "Clara Belle," in referring to one of the dresses worn by Marie Prescott, said: "It felt the same. The waist was loose like a bubble, and the skirt hung straight and spoke to a belt. It was a kind of cover that looked as though it was made of underclothes, not even a corset. During about half of the last act she and her lover hugged each other all over the stage, and no considerable part of the loosely-draped figure was left uncaressed by the industrious and ardent male member of the company. 'This shall be our wedding night,' he said, and it began to look as though he really meant it."—Ex.

Wanted a Will.

A colored man about 60 years of age, blind in one eye and walking with a cane, hobbled up stairs into the office of a Griswold street lawyer yesterday and announced that he desired to make his will.

"Got much property to leave?" asked the lawyer.

"Well, sah, Ize persessed of a dog, a coo' stove, a wheelbarrow an' two flatirons dat my fust wife left me."

"And who are you going to leave them to?"

"My darter, Nancy, ober on Indiana street. Ize married agin you know, an' I want to put dat property whar my present wife can't git it. She doan' git nuffin' belongin' to me if I can help it."

"It will cost you $5 to have a will drawn."

"Shoo! Can't cost dat."

"Yes, it will."

"Den I reckon I'll administrate on my stuff afore I die. Would dat work?"

"Certainly."

"Den I'll run de dog off, lend de wheelbarrow, pocket de flatirons, an' stan' by to rush de cook-stove outer de house de fust time de ole woman goes to de grocery. Kin I git a warrant heah?"

"What for?"

"Fur assault an' battery. When de ole woman finds what Ize dun she'll walk all ober me, an' I might as well save time by gittin' out de warrant now."

He was directed to the proper place, and he went away saying that it would be still better to have her arrested and sent up for ninety days in advance.—Free Press.

He Was Not Afraid of a Rat.

Rats will fight desperately when death is the only alternative, and he is a rat who keeps out of reach of their teeth. The rat who absolutely shows how a man of "nerve" ought to act when the enemy is at every step range. A prize happened to be offered for the rat who would join a group of men who were waiting to see a ferret kill a rat. The cage was opened, and the rat most unexpectedly ran up the printer's leg inside his trousers. He did not scream or clutch, but clenched his hands, stood erect, and coolly told those present to be quiet. "Now he is going up my knee; now he is on my thigh; now he has passed to the small of my back; now he rests. Don't strike; don't seize him. Here, take a small stick, tap gently. That's it; drive him down easily—don't provoke him. Now he moves, now he turns—press gently; now he descends, there he goes around my hip; now he turns downward; here he comes by my knee—there he's out." And so he was, and the ferret forthwith monopolized him.
